

Eugene Washington PCORI Engagement Award:

Capacity Building for a Learning PCOR System

The team is working on creating materials to share what they learned.

The team is in its last stages of creating materials and sharing what was learned over the two-year project period. This project ranks information from most important to least important, and shares PCOR evidence with all stakeholders – patients, care partners, clinicians, health systems and policymakers – so that they can take part in many projects and be in different parts of the research process, not just when they are a part of one PCOR study.
