

Projects and Publications

The DISRUPTS project with St. Lawrence Health System

The PCORI Eugene Washington Engagement Award: DISRUPTS, is in its final phase. The PATIENTS Program continues to work with the research team of rural upstate New York's St. Lawrence Health System's (SLHS) Clinical and Rural Health Research Department to assist with doing Patient-Centered Outcomes Research (PCOR) in the North Country area in New York state. The group also got more funds from PCORI to look at best ways to teach the SLHS community about stopping the spread of COVID-19 through education sessions.

Projects and Publications

In the video below, hear an update from Carly Lovelett, Clinical Research Director at St. Lawrence Health System (SLHS), who leads the DISRUPTS project at SLHS.

To see any of the videos developed as part of the DISRUPTS project, please click here.

